RIOTS AND REVELS IN EARLY AMERICA, 1600-1860

Seminar in Historical Research and Writing

Public gatherings provide an important window into social relations and the level of unity or division within communities as well as the construction of individual and group identity. In this research seminar, we will examine how other historians have explicated crowd actions, political protests, parades, celebrations, spectacles, and ceremonies from 1600 to 1860. To guide students as they pursue their own research project, we will use primary and secondary texts to explore how historians gather and process evidence, develop interpretations, and produce a finished piece of work that contributes to the field. Students will be encouraged to select a research topic related to the theme of riots, revels, ceremonies, or public gatherings as a way of exploring a historical problem.

This course offers an opportunity to further develop the research and writing skills necessary for advanced work in history. For each of you, the paper you complete for this course may be the beginning of a published article or book. Work hard and enjoy!

REQUIREMENTS

Class Participation:

Research and writing are often considered solitary occupations and indeed the deep and sustained thinking needed to complete a major research paper requires much solitude. However, every scholar needs the cooperation, feedback, and support of other scholars. As class members we will try to provide that for each other. Therefore it is essential that you come to class prepared to discuss the reading assignments and also to engage in a collective analysis of your own and others research and writing. Participation in class discussion will be graded. It is up to each of us to make this an exciting, challenging, and collaborative learning experience so bring your ideas and questions.

Shorter Writing Assignments:

You will be asked to write an occasional response paper of 2-3 pages sometimes addressing a particular question or set of questions. You will also be writing a report on a primary source. There will be additional short writing assignments throughout the semester that will help to prepare for or contribute to your final paper.

Final Research Paper:

The final paper should be a well-developed research paper of 20-25 pages that presents a thesis and argument about a historical topic based on substantial evidence from primary sources. The topic must also be situated within a broad historical and historiographic context based on relevant secondary sources. The specific topic should be in some way related to the theme of the course -- the social and cultural meaning of public gatherings or private rituals and center on events and developments that took place before 1860. The paper might take a public or private gathering as starting point for a detailed examination of community, class conflict, race, gender, or the cultural work of spectacle, ritual, protest, or celebration. In the paper you should aim for a skilled and imaginative analysis of primary sources to open up your specific topic.

There will be several preliminary research and bibliographic assignments along the way that should help you distribute your work load throughout the semester. Each paper must include at least three pages of supplementary material such as copies of maps, letters, images of material artifacts, paintings, drawings, or architectural plans. The paper must be typed, double-spaced with one inch margins. Chicago style endnotes or footnotes and a full bibliography are required. Please consult Turabian, A Manual for Writers, for style and format of notes and bibliography.
