Scope and Purpose of the Course

According to the American Historical Association (AHA), we face a challenge and a responsibility as history educators in contemporary society. “The history taught in classrooms and presented in books and articles too often lacks energy and imagination. As a consequence, many students not only fail to gain a sense of history, they come to dislike it.” The AHA has issued a call to action: “As educational institutions share responsibility for devaluing the past, so also do they have it in their power to restore its value by educating those in their charge to think historically and to use knowledge and understanding of the past to challenge the present and the future.” (See Liberal Learning and the History Major http://www.historians.org/pubs/Free/Liberallearning.htm)

This course is especially designed for students who are concentrating in social studies and plan to engage in teaching as a career. As an aspiring educator, how will you instill in your students a sense of the value and relevance of thinking historically in the 21st century? How do people learn history? Is there something distinctive about learning history compared to learning other academic subjects? This course will introduce you to the growing scholarship that addresses the distinctive challenges of teaching and learning history as both a subject and a discipline.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon successful completion of this course students will be able to:

1. Explain the practical and conceptual components of historical thinking and the relevance of historical reasoning for 21st century learners.
2. Use research findings and theory to analyze challenges students encounter in learning to think historically.
3. Evaluate the effectiveness of history lesson plans for teaching historical thinking, paying particular attention to the role of primary sources and promoting analytical reading.
4. Evaluate formative and summative assessment strategies based on alignment between specific learning objectives, teaching strategies, and student learning activities.
5. Collaborate to develop a lesson focusing on a particular historical topic. The activity should include effective scaffolds for learning historical thinking using primary sources. Design teams will effectively explain to peer teacher candidates how the lesson addresses the scholarship of teaching and learning history.

Evaluation

| Lesson Plan Analysis I: Historical Thinking | 25% |
| Lesson Plan Analysis II: Scaffolding Learning | 25% |
A note on gauging your mid-semester grade status: I will submit unsatisfactory reports after the first six weeks of the semester for students who are at risk of making a grade in the course below a C.

Lesson Plan Analyses (75%; SLO 1-4)
Using the assigned scholarship, you will evaluate how effectively a particular lesson is designed to address challenges students face in learning to think historically. Each analysis will focus on a different aspect of lesson plans that are designed to develop historical thinking. In each case you must explicitly apply and cite appropriate assigned scholarship to evaluate a different aspect of the lesson plan.

The first analysis focuses on recognizing specific historical thinking skills and concepts developed in a particular lesson and evaluating challenges students will face in learning those skills and concepts based on research findings presented in the assigned scholarship (SLO 1 and 2). Your evaluation will consider such issues as:

- What is historical thinking and why should students study history in the 21st century? Consider the study of history as both a subject and a discipline.
- What is “unnatural” about historical thinking and what distinctive challenges do students face in learning how to think historically?

The second analysis focuses on elements of a lesson plan that scaffold student learning and make disciplinary thinking visible (SLO 3). You will evaluate how effectively a lesson uses primary sources to promote historical thinking and analytical reading.

The third analysis evaluates the role of formative and summative assessment considering alignment among learning objectives, teaching strategies, and student activities. (SLO 4)

In all cases analysis should apply appropriate ideas from assigned readings with citations in Turabian style. Specific instructions will be provided as the semester unfolds, including workshops noted in the schedule below. You will be invited to submit drafts for discussion in the workshops.

Team Portfolio: Lesson Plan and Presentation (25%; SLO 1-5)
Teams create an inquiry-based learning experience using primary sources to teach historical thinking on a particular topic. Portfolio requirements include lesson overview, primary sources, worksheets or other handouts, strategies for formative and summative assessment, an explanation of the most important ways the learning experience addresses historical thinking and 21st century skills; a bibliography of resources for the learning experience. Portfolios will be graded based on effectiveness of lesson design for teaching historical thinking AND effectiveness of team collaboration. Teams will present an overview of their lesson for peer review at the end of the semester. Teams should use peer review to revise the portfolio before submission for the final grade. Specific instructions and due dates will be provided as the semester unfolds.

Course Policies

Participation and Attendance Policy
1. Consistent attendance—this is a seminar, not a traditional lecture course. We will be critically evaluating the content of the readings and practicing the application of analytical skills during each class period. You will not be able to make up for your absences by copying someone else’s notes. For this reason, consistent attendance is essential to your learning in this course. Attendance is mandatory. I will take attendance at the beginning of every class. You must attend at least one hour of the class period to be counted for full attendance for the class. If the University is closed for snow you will not, of course, be counted absent. If it snows and the University is open, class will be held as scheduled and attendance counts. In the event that I am unable to attend class due to unforeseen circumstances I will distribute an email message and post an announcement to Bb at least two hours (if possible) before class is scheduled to begin. Documentation for absences will not be collected except in cases where an extended absence may be necessary (for example, hospitalization). There will be a 3% reduction of the student’s final grade for each absence after the first 3. Beyond even this penalty, a student who seriously neglects attendance and class preparation risks failing the course. If you are experiencing a personal crisis that requires you to miss more than 2 classes, please let me know at that time (not afterwards).

2. Thorough preparation for class—readings must be completed before class and assignments must be turned in on time, including any ungraded Discussion Board postings. Discussion Board participation (like class attendance) is mandatory. These are ungraded assignments and will not be evaluated in terms of formal writing standards. In teaching terms, Discussion Board assignments are formative assessments that enable me to identify areas of understanding and misunderstanding and allow you to practice your thinking before you are formally graded. Failure to submit a Discussion Board assignment by the deadline will be counted as a class absence. See the attendance policy stated in the syllabus for the total number of absences you may accumulate without a grade penalty. Discussion Board postings that do not address course materials in a substantive way will not be counted for credit.

3. Regular contributions to class discussions—participation is not formally graded as a specific percentage of the final grade but the success of this course for your learning depends on active intellectual engagement with your peers. Peer review will be an important component of the Team Portfolio process.

Academic Integrity
UNCG considers academic dishonesty to be a serious offense. Dishonest behavior in any form, including cheating, plagiarism, deception of effort, and unauthorized assistance, may result in such sanctions as a failing grade on an assignment or failure in the course depending on the nature of the offense. Students must follow the guidelines of the University Policy on Academic Integrity: http://sa.uncg.edu/handbook/academic-integrity-policy/

Electronic Communication
Students are responsible for checking Blackboard and UNCG email on a regular basis. Students are encouraged to utilize email and other forms of digital communication when interacting with the instructor (lctolber@uncg.edu). When using email, students are to be professional and courteous. Students should also remember email is an asynchronous form of communication. Thus, while a prompt response may be desired, it may not always be possible (especially late at night and on weekends). Students should allow at least 24 hours (48 hours on weekends) for a response. That said, the instructor answers emails in the timeliest fashion possible.

Late Assignment Penalty
Meeting deadlines is an essential element of professional behavior. Please note that unless arrangements have been made well in advance of due dates, late assignments will be penalized by a 3% reduction in the final grade for every day the assignment is late. Assignments later than one week will not be accepted for credit without an extremely impressive explanation.

Course Schedule

January 14   Introductions

Unit 1: Theoretical Frameworks

- What is historical thinking and why does it matter?
- Distinguish the different dimensions of historical thinking: disciplinary skills historians use to study the past, conceptual patterns historians use to make sense of the past, and historical subject matter.
- What challenges do students encounter in learning to think historically?
