The purpose of this course is to introduce graduate students to some of the most significant scholarly works and topics on the Market Revolution, ca. 1815-1850. Students will critically analyze historical monographs through class discussion and written reviews and will write either a research paper based on primary and secondary sources or a historiographical paper.

The learning outcomes for this course are that through these readings and written assignments you will be able to define the Market Revolution, explain the diverse manifestations of the Market Revolution, and understand the crucial place of the Market Revolution in American History.

Required Books (in the order that you will read them):

Recommended Book:

Assignments:
Besides reading a book and articles each week and discussing them in class, you will turn in a written review for four of the assigned books. In addition, one week you will lead discussion of that week’s entire readings in class. Class discussion is central to this course and will form a significant part of your grade. Finally, you will write a ~20 page research OR historiographical paper due at the end of the semester.
Doing the book reviews:
You will prepare professional-quality book reviews for four of your assigned weekly books. Professional quality means that your review could be published in an academic history journal, and, thus, the review should expose the author’s thesis and main supporting points, discuss and evaluate the evidence presented by the author to prove his/her thesis, suggest how this book fits into the historiography on that subject, and tell who the author is. Do NOT tell me that the book is “interesting” for that means absolutely nothing. Do tell me why the book is important, what its flaws (if any) are, and why we must all be familiar with its thesis to better understand the Market Revolution. Browse through the book reviews in the journals Reviews in American History, Journal of the Early Republic, William and Mary Quarterly (all are in the library or available online through the J-Stor database) for examples of what I am asking for. You may consult published reviews of the books you are working on, but do not copy and paste from them, as that is cheating, and I want to read your words not someone else’s. Each review should be double spaced and about 3 pages in length, no more than 4 pages and no less than 2.

Research or Historiographical Paper:
In consultation with me, you will identify a topic related to the era of the Market Revolution to write a research or historiographical paper. Your proposed topic is due by February 13, The bibliography is due by March 6, and the final paper is due by May 1. Your paper must have a title page. You must use footnotes or endnotes (your choice) but follow the Chicago Manual of Style Humanities format. Links to Chicago style manual are here: http://www.chicagomanualofstyle.org/tools_citationguide.html. The length is about 15-20 pages of text (not counting title page, notes, and bibliography).
